Open Reverently And
Behold Ye Mysteries Of Ye Sentinel.

Greeting

O THE Montana Spirit, the Sentinel which guards our present honor and our future hope we dedicate this, our book, in the hopes of fostering that spirit by helping to bring the Montana man and woman into closer relationship with each other and with alumni; to aid them in making new friends, to impress upon them their own imperfections, to assist Montana's sons and daughters to be brave and loyal, to teach them to work faithfully and strive earnestly, to separate the dross from the true metal, to give a merrier tone to our daily life. This was our endeavor. We present our best attempt at its fulfillment.

M O N T A N A

There once was a voice in the pine trees,

So the Indian legends have told,

And it spoke to all those who would hear,

In the land of the copper and gold.

It still can be heard if you listen,

And this voice of the pines seems to say,

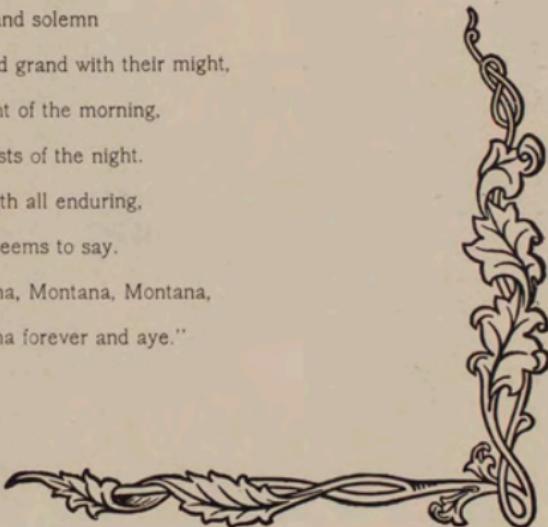

"Montana, Montana, Montana,

Montana forever and aye."

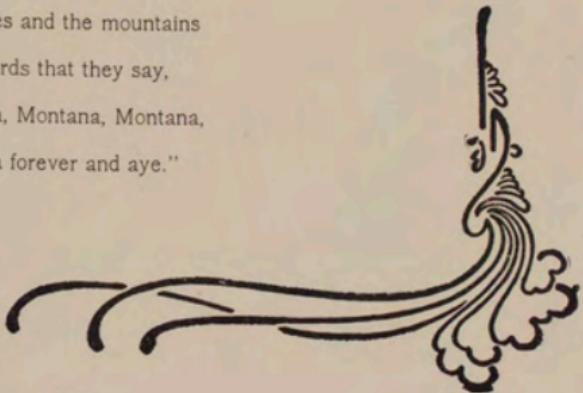

In beauty majestic and solemn
The mountains stand grand with their might,
Now dear in the light of the morning,
Now softened by mists of the night.
Suggestive of strength all enduring,
Their spirit serene seems to say.

"Montana, Montana, Montana,
Montana forever and aye."

From sources high up in the mountains
Through forest and canyon and vale
The streams with their dash and their murmur,
Are telling a wonderful tale.
They answer the pines and the mountains
And these are the words that they say,
"Montana, Montana, Montana,
Montana forever and aye."

But stronger than that of the mountains
More sweet than the voice of the pines,
Persistent as that of the rivers,
Another voice echoes the lines—
The voice of her sons and her daughters,
"Montana, Montana, Montana,
Montana forever and aye."

"The Rubaiyat of 1909"

1.

Wake, for the Power which scattered into flight
Each vestige of class-spirit from his sight,
Drives Preps along with Seniors in his rage,
But stops before '09 in wild affright.

2.

Ourselves when young did eagerly frequent
The Chapel—and there heard great argument
From all, against class-spirit, but the talk
Came out by that same ear wherein it went.

3.

With us the seed of wisdom did they sow,
And with their own hands wrought to make it grow;
But heeding not the counsels which they gave,
We acted in a way that wasn't slow.

4.

Before the phantom of class-spirit died,
Methinks a voice among our number cried,
"When all the other classes organize,
Why nods the drowsy Third Prep still outside?"

5.

And so we organized without delay,
Chose officers, and then our colors gay,
Our coat-of-arms, a turtle and a hare,
And motto which we hold unto this day.

6.

Whether as Freshman or as Sophomore,
Our stunts were many, and we gained much lore,
We had some honors, and we had some scrapes,
But these with equal dignity we bore.

7.

The revelation of the Prof. so learned,
 Who rose before us, and as prophets burned,
 We held as stories, which awoke from sleep
 They told their students—and to sleep returned.

8.

But one we loved, the loveliest and the best,
 Whom we took with us in our earnest quest
 For pleasure, and when we had pleasure found,
 Then one by one went satisfied to rest.

9.

The years went on, and we at length became
 Great Juniors, who had made themselves a name,
 But sadly we discovered what it meant
 To write a book and thereby win more fame.

10.

Ah make the most of what you yet may spend,
 'Ere you must to the Sent'nel room ascend!
 You Soph'mores know not what an Annual means—
 You'll find out, never fear, before the end.

11.

And when like us, as Juniors you shall meet,
 Feeling your list of trouble is complete,
 And come at length unto the Sent'nel room
 Where we hold forth—turn down an empty seat!

12.

Oh, fellow Juniors, fill the cup that clears
 Today of past regrets and future fears.
 Our scrapes and even this, our Annual,
 What will they matter in a hundred years?

13.

A book of verses underneath the bough,
 The campus green, the misty hills and Thou,
 Oh brave and gallant class of 1909;
 Then anything were Paradise enow!

LITERARY DEPARTMENT

LOVE WOUNDED.

(Suggested by a translation from the Greek poet Anacreon.)

1.

The sky was blue, and the air was sweet
By the breath of the Spring perfumed,
And Love, who was weary for once, lay down
To rest where the roses bloomed.

2.

His quiver was empty. He laughed with glee,
And caught at a rose that hung
On the lowest branch, but a bee hid there
And the little God was stung.

3.

Half running, half flying, with cries of pain
He sought out his mother fair.
The beautiful Venus held him close,
And patted the wee God's hair.

4.

"Mother, I'm killed, and I die," he cried,
A winged serpent, the bee,
Hath stung me here in the hand—just look—
I surely will die," wailed he.

5.

But Venus laughed at the little God.
"Dear Love, if the sting of a bee
Afflicts you so sorely, what think you then
Of those whom you smite?" asked she.

6.

So Love grew silent, and dried his tears
As he thought of the roses red;
Then,—"Mother, my quiver is empty quite—
I want some more arrows," he said.

7.

Then singing he left, for the air was sweet
By the breath of the Spring perfumed,
And Love went back to his tasks again
To work while the roses bloomed.

The Boy

When the Boy came there was rejoicing. Father smiled all day long, that calm, satisfied smile, that makes men who have had "first sons" before, look indulgently upon him, as tho to say, "We forgive him. He knows not what he does." Moreover, Father sent telegrams. He had a tendency, Father had, to be extravagant on rare occasions.

Mother watched the Boy with her sad, tired eyes all day long, too, as he lay beside her in the great bed. Of course, mothers are different. They might smile all day about their new sons if they wished, and no one would bother their heads about it. It makes a great difference when mothers do things. Mother didn't smile, but if she had people wouldn't have looked indulgently upon her.

As for the Boy himself, well, he was just a boy. He wasn't any fatter than most babies, nor he wasn't any thinner. His hair wasn't any longer or any thicker; and his eyes weren't any bluer or blacker, or browner or greyer. He was just a comfortable baby, the kind you like to hold, and that was all. For the life of him, he couldn't produce a single marvelous trait.

Father thought he had a fine forehead, "indicative," he said, "of great mentality." But he hadn't. He had sad, tired eyes, tho, like his Mother's. No one ever thought them very wonderful, except his Mother, and she thought in her own quiet way, that it was good of God to give such eyes to her son.

Perhaps, because the boy wasn't very wonderful, was the reason that when the Other Boy came he stepped out of prominence. Before, it was he, who had come into the parlor, and watched some one else drink tea and have two lumps of sugar while he ate a dry seed cake. Before, he had had to speak pieces for the admiring public, and he had had to receive kisses from the same, all the while cold shivers were running down his poor little spine.

Now, it was the immaculate Other Boy who "showed off." The Boy wasn't very sorry, either, for he hated to be kissed. Moreover, he hated above all things to be clean. When the Boy saw a clean collar and a new tie, he ducked. If your ears grew red, and your eyes stuck out when you wore a stiff collar, where was the beauty of one, he wanted to know!

But even so, on the day of horrors, the Boy was sentenced to a white duck suit, and a stiff collar. The day of horrors was the day when Mother entertained.

That morning the Boy sat up in bed and stuck out his tongue at the nurse. Why he should have done it he didn't know, for he liked the nurse well enough. But the minute he had done it, the minute he had received the warm rap on his ear, he realized that that day was going to be upside down. The Boy often had such days as this and he knew, from past experience that the worst had not yet come.

At breakfast, he sat staring out of the window. Somewhere on the lawn a bird was singing and he wondered vaguely if it were the robin that had bathed with him in the creek yesterday, or if it were the one that had a nest in the orchard, or if it were a robin at all.

The Boy came suddenly back to the dining-room. His glass of milk was flooding the cloth, and some of it was trickling down on his bare brown knees.

The Other Boy was watching him with big eyes. He was never known to do such things. He minced when he ate—the Boy reflected.

The Boy saw his Father's mouth settle into a straight, hard line; he knew there was no help forthcoming from that direction, so he looked to his Mother. But her eyes looked very tiredly at him, so the Boy got up and went out. He didn't cry usually, and to-day he was quite disgusted to find a huge tear on the end of his nose. He looked back at the house to be sure the Other Boy hadn't seen it, and then went on down to the gate.

If Peter hadn't come along then, there wouldn't have been any story. But Peter came. Peter had a can of bait, a pole and some lunch.

"Come on," he said. The Boy was silent.

"Come on, Fraidy," called Peter from the dust of the road. The Boy wasn't afraid, so he told Peter to "Shut up." For him, it was the chance of a lifetime. No stiff suit, no clean face and hands, and no collar—"Say," he said, "I'll go."

He went to the stables, got his pole, and crept back by way of the kitchen, why by way of the kitchen the Boy never knew. But things were upside down that day and on the window-sill was a plate of doughnuts. The Boy saw them and took them; his conscience hurt him, but he took them just the same.

They scuttled down the warm road and thro the alderberry hedge, till they came to the creek. Peter crashed thro the brush and brambles and the Boy followed.

They fished in silence. Sometimes the Boy stopped to watch the squirrels, more often to listen to the birds. Once he saw a violet, and he stooped to pick it. It struck him then how like his Mother's eyes it was. But Peter said,

"Aw, doncher know enough to land a fish when yer got him?" and disdained to speak to him further.

They dined far up the creek. The Boy ate heartily of Peter's lunch.

"Here, eat yer own grub!" said Peter.

It was the strangest thing in the world, but the Boy couldn't eat those doughnuts, and he liked doughnuts, too. Peter ate them, tho, and with very little urging.

Once, late in the afternoon, it came over the Boy—what was his Mother doing? He took the violet from his pocket, thought of his Mother's eyes, and wondered how they would look when she knew he had run away.

"I'm going home, Pete," he announced. Peter glanced around him, and then followed without a word. It had come over them suddenly that they were lost.

They hastened on, always with the stream, peering hurriedly to the right and left. Peter was looking for bears. Peter always was afraid of bears, the Boy thought. But all the Boy feared was seeing tears in the tired eyes of his Mother, if he ever got home.

It was dark now, and because Peter was crying the Boy reached over and took his hand. If it had been in the day-time, this might have been silly—in the dark it was different. Anyhow, Peter was crying, and if Peter cried first, there was alway excuse.

Once the Boy stumbled and fell over a dead branch. His head struck a stone and he could feel a warmth creeping down his damp cheek. He wouldn't cry anyhow, he thought. Peter might cry, for Peter was Peter, but he couldn't. It would have been insufferable, if the Boy had cried. So he went on pulling Peter with him. The moon shone thro the trees on the Boy's white face, and when Peter saw it, he grew almost as afraid of the Boy as he had been of the bears.

Suddenly the Boy stopped; Peter never forgot the Boy's face as it looked then. There was moonlight on his pale, little set face, but joy-light in his eyes.

"Peter," he said, and pointed thro the brush to the twinkling lights, "we're found!"

The Boy reached up and touched his Mother's face. "Mother," he said, "did you cry too?"

Coelebs Senex Amat

Can I see even as she today
Is seeing, as she scans the way—
The way come o'er, the way to go—
Think her thought, too, in mine? Ah, no.
How daring a desire—to think
As thinks my maiden at the morn.
And yet—and yet heart does not shrink
From such desire, though heart be torn.
For oh, how one coarse mind can hurt
To feel along its fibres thrill
The music of her morning thought,
With mystery and meaning fraught,
That might a man's defeat convert
Today into undaunted will.

Tell how she looks out on the day?
No more than I can think her thought.
Can words weave into sight the grace
Enmeshed in hair's sweet disarray?
How cold are words that fire to trace
That burns within the velvet screen.
Her cheek, which veils it so that eye
May look on it and not be hurt!
The loveliness of her eye assert
In words? Such words themselves deny
The power to peer into the seen,
Much less the unseen in her eye.
I may not see—but words are naught.
I can remember only how
That time my heart sudden upswelled
My throat was tight, my breath I held
And tears upsprang to shield my sight—
Her beauty hurt so with delight
And she is more than winsome now.

Can even she say what she thinks?
A little maiden yet, and yet
A woman? Not just since today
A woman—who indeed may say
Just where are joined to each life's links?
A woman this long time, I know,
Some awe compelling me bestow
Upon her womanhood, but all
A woman? Not even yet all that.
Sometimes, in silence, checks my soul,
"For now she is a woman—hush!"
Sometimes bewildered by her blush
And childlikeness, "A little sprite
For me and every one to let
Quick words shout out our whole delight.

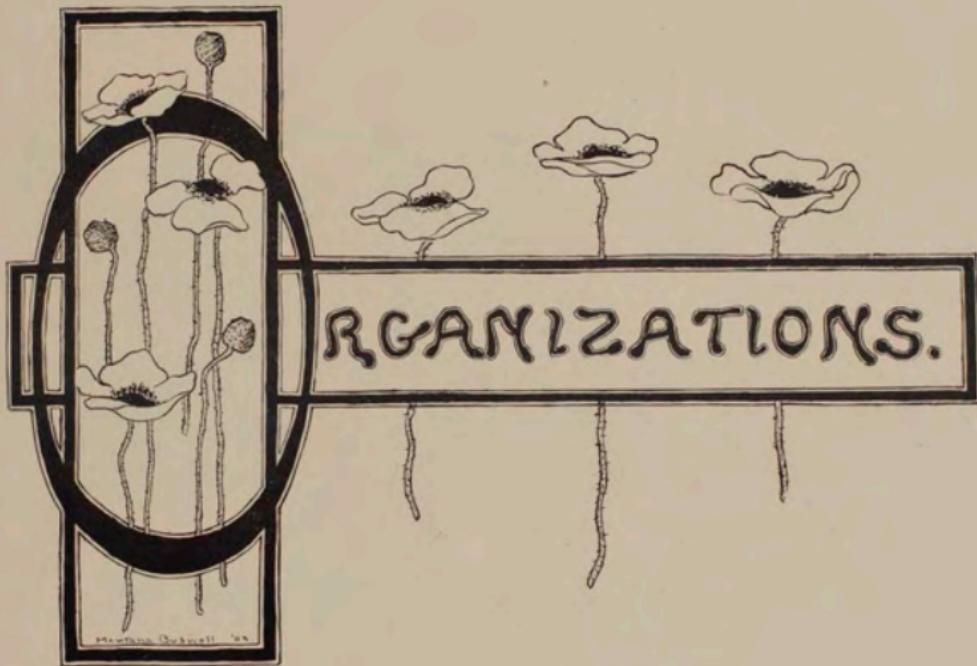

Why needs the jealous self-control?"
I want her so just once I may
From out my heart's strange din today
(Makes doubt if I am man or boy)
Shout out all unabashed my glee,
Such a girl is such a friend to me.
And sure I will be still enough
In that fantastic future brooding,
Dark into every joy intruding.
The silence will be long indeed,
If heart's life ends with heart's blood need.
Wring from today its store of joy
And let no heart any love rebuff.
We shall need all before the end.

She came into my soul slow stealing,
Nor shall go out my heart unhealing
Of loneliness she found therein.
To love a little is no sin
If God is love—and there is life
Beyond the end that seems an end.
For surely there friend shall love friend,
And more than here a man loves wife.
* * * *

The biggest puzzle 'neath my lid
Is why she still prefers a kid.

Science Association

It occurred during this year to one of the advanced students in science that a closer association of those working in the science departments would be both interesting and helpful. According to her suggestion then, Prof. Harkins called a meeting of the students enrolled in the scientific course, and proposed to them some such organization. The idea was cordially received by the assembled body and a committee on the constitution was appointed by the chairman. At the first regular meeting of the society held April 8th, the constitution and by-laws recommended by this committee were read, amended, and adopted, and officers for the rest of the semester were elected.

All members of the Faculty in the departments of the sciences, all regular science students, and all other students having had a certain amount of scientific work, are eligible for active membership.

Besides, there are associate and honorary members, who are elected by the active body. The officers must be students. Meetings are held every two weeks, when papers on scientific subjects are presented, and current scientific events are brought to the notice of the members. These meetings partake of a social as well as a formal character.

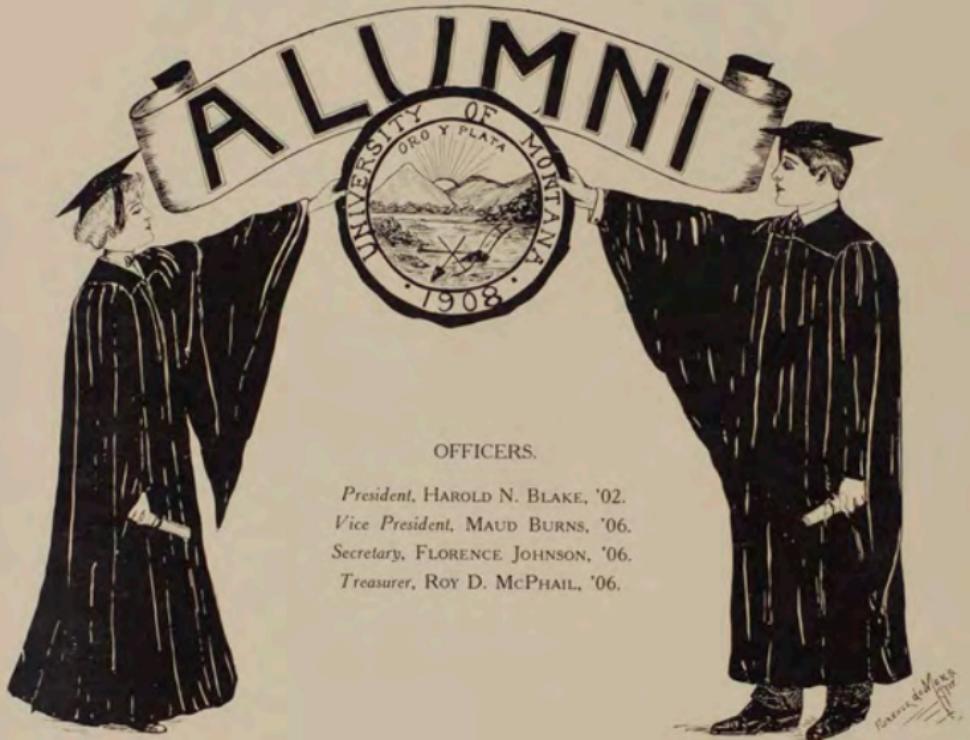

The object of the association, as stated in the constitution, is the advancement of interest in scientific subjects, and the closer union of the science students in the University of Montana.

Alumni Association

In the growth and development of our Universities and Colleges it is given to the Alumni to wield an influence that counts for much. An influence that is in a great measure reciprocal, and becomes more powerful with the growth of the institution.

Within the past year the possibilities of the Alumni Association of the University of Montana have been realized to a greater extent than at any time since its inception. This sentiment was particularly apparent at the annual meeting of the Association last June. With each succeeding commencement the work being done in our commonwealth by our leading educational institution is brought home with ever increasing emphasis. The graduating classes are becoming larger and more representative. Our ranks are being continually recruited by the best and brightest young minds in the state. With ever increasing numbers we are beginning to realize the power that lies within our grasp and the debt we owe our Alma Mater.

The life of the Association is experiencing a transitional period. Heretofore our restricted number has hampered us in any movement that might be undertaken. But now in nearly every city in the state are representatives of the copper, silver and gold.

Last June in order to meet the greater demands upon the Association, to do better the work at hand, a reorganization of the Association was made; the constitution and by-laws revised, and an effort made through its officers and the Montana Alumnus to become more closely identified with the activities of the school.

The Alumni should ever keep in mind that they can aid the University of Montana to fulfill the magnificent destiny that is hers, and record in the annals of the institution a splendid work done by a loyal active Association.

College Athletics

According to the ancient philosophers truth is seen only through the perspective of time. The most prominent features of a recent event are known; the details are seldom seen in their true light. Their relation to the result is forgotten.

This is especially true of college athletics. The friendly rivalry which should exist in contests of this kind, occasionally becomes so intense that it is little better than personal enmity. This can only lead to the most unsportsmanlike conduct; unnecessary roughness among the contestants and hostility of the spectators toward the visiting team.

It is not with these extreme cases, however, that we have to deal. Such excess on the part of team or student has never been at the University of Montana, nor any of the educational institutions of the Northwest.

Other conditions, hardly less important, confront nearly every institution which engages in intercollegiate contests. The relation between perfectly clean athletics and ultimate success is sometimes forgotten. Rules of eligibility are occasionally translated with sufficient freedom to admit some athlete who would not otherwise be allowed to compete. While this in itself is not necessarily a serious offence, it has a tendency to lower the standard of the college. The effect on the scholarship of a team is well known. This cannot fail to react on the college.

The attitude of the student body also invites the attention of those who desire a high standard of athletics. There are few who do not.

The teams should have the heartiest support of all loyal students. This is quite as necessary in practice games as in championship contests. This, however, is not the only requisite. No one should be so blinded by partisan spirit that he cannot recognize the good points of an opposing team. Courage, ability and determination are quite as desirable qualities in one's opponents as in his warmest friends. They should receive the same recognition. Proper appreciation of a skillful play on the part of an opponent is not inconsistent with loyal and hearty support of the home team.

The University of Montana is on terms of the utmost good fellowship with all of those colleges with which it has held contests in the past. Defeat has sometimes been our portion; as often, victory. Many contests with distant colleges show that we are entitled to rank among the strongest institutions of the West.

ENGINEERS' SONG

Praise Oscar from whom all blessings flow
 Praise Natty who helps him spend his dough
 Praise them all ye Varsity host
 Praise Oscar, praise Natty, but praise Oscar the most

* * * * *

(First 3d Prep. in German). "What gender is postal card in German?"
 (Second 3d Prep.) "It must be masculine. They always go by mail." (male.)

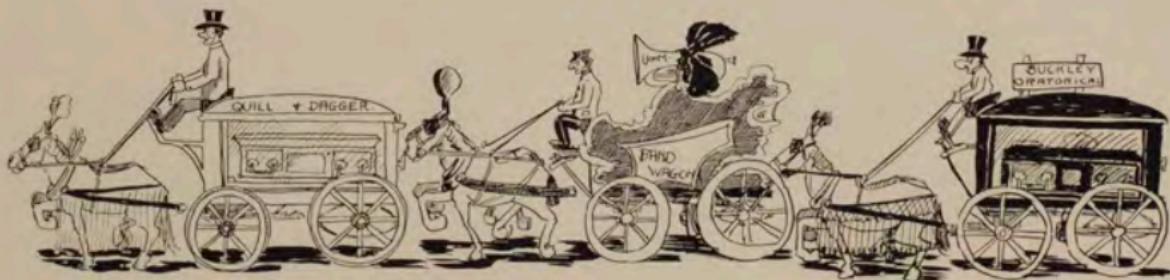

"What is the radius of the oscillating circle?"
 (Van, after some moments). "Yes?"

* * * * *

(Montie, reading German.) "Damit starb er."
 (Translating). Damn it, he died.

* * * * *

(Miss R.) "Ell now if these triangles are symmetrical then the sides are proportional respectively one to the other.
 Mr. Fredell, how about this side?"
 Mr. Fredell. "It is not respectable."

A new phenomenon I have seen
Freshies are no longer green
The reason which I've sought for oft
At last I've found; they are so "Soph'd."
* * * * *

A certain young man named Berry
Of girls has always been wary
By the fates 'twas averred
He'd be caught by a "Bird."
But really, he doesn't seem scary

* * * * *

HER AIM

She is a pretty Sophomore
Whose hair is ne'er awry
She puckers up her thoughtful brow
And says her aim is high

I think if she would tell the truth
How high her aim doth soar
Her answer'd be, without a doubt,
"My 'A. L. M.' is six feet four."

LETTERS TO THE LOCAL EDITOR

Local Editor:—In replying to yours of Saturday I wish to say that I do not use Peroxide on my hair, but sometimes use H<sub>2</sub>O<sub>2</sub> as a tonic and wash. It makes it very clean and white.

yours

SALLY.

* * * * *

Mr. Editor:—I am a large boy for my age, and some say I act much younger than I ought. I have a fur overcoat which I wear summer and winter. I am interested in the band at the University, and would be pleased to be mentioned in your book.

Yours idiotically

HOWARD.

P. S.—No, that was not Huyler's chocolates which I donated for the girls' race.

* * * * *

Dear Mr. Editor:—I am a little boy from Lewistown. My Pa is professor of the school there. I go to school at the University but would not like it but for Leta H. She is my girl. Say, don't say anything about us in your Sentinel or I can get even next year.

Yours sweetly

SILLOWAY.

* * * * *

Mr. Editor:—In answer to yours of the 37th I have in my library all the old and latest almanacs and funny papers, from which I have taken only the best for my chapel speeches. You are perfectly welcome to the rest.

Yours

ELROD.

The Ara

The nox was dark as nubilus terra
A tempus optus to steal the ara
In a templum up the staira
Sat an ara ante facultus
Erat now in silent sleepus.
Two boys went up in stealthy crepus
To steal the ara, clandestinus.

These youths with much industria,
Came forth to steal without disguisia
Nonquam braver, nonquam truer
Quam his duo unquam fuit
(If there was I never knew it)
The corpus of this ara oblongus
Weighed full much as hundred poundus;
But fortier muscles had puer never
Quam hic two, bonus et clever.

They took the ara with much timore.
"No more," said they, "will it this place decorare."
Down stairs they took it, sans evento
Across the campus cum silento;
Exterma porta stood all expectum
The horse and buggy all receptum,
To take hic duo et hundred pounds
Where there was a hiding locus.

These boys had thought in sultum jocum
Quod a road was too small locum
For talis horse to make a turnus
Circum himself from stem to sternus.
This bonus horse was swift as hellum
Amabat much the smel of bellum
Amabat much the smell of bellum;
So they sped to young Toole's domum,
And put the ara in the barnum.

Now each one seeks his pater's domo
Feeling proud as any homo,
Knowing certe they will ripen
Into heros sans more strifen.
They vow they will not tell the story,
Plenam sport et plenior glory;
Yet they whisper cum secrete
Of the deed without discrete.

Pompey, David, Sampson, Caesar,
Cyrus, Blackhawk, Shalmonesar,
Tell me, where est non thy gloria?
Where the honors of victoria?
Thus they spread their fame profundus,
The fame that's born within their mindus,
Till the "Prexy" hears the factus,
And proceeds upon their trackus.

One day they find the "Prexy" knoweth
Where the ara is bestoweth;
In haste they seek to change the locus
To the cellar of Toole's domus,
Where the orbs of "Prexy" bonum
Cannot see the ara oblongum.
Forth they come with hasty gusto
To reach the cellar all secreto.

"Prexy" cometh all unexpectum
And sees the ara, in transitum;
The air rings out his vociferatus,
The ara drops, and puer fleetus
Seeketh hiding in the domo,
Where the "Prexy" seeks in vaino
Two pale youths, now quite dejectum,
All forlorn and sans respectum.

POLICE DOCKET

A. No. 1.—RICHARD KESSLER.

Alias "BISMARCK."

Alias "PEENHEAD."

Description.—About 5 feet, 3 inches tall, although he appears much taller; measures 49 inches around the head and has chest expansion of 2 feet; usually wears a nobby suit of blue denim, and was last seen near Science Hall with a "wave;" is of very retiring disposition, and it is difficult to get him into conversation.

Wanted by the German Kaiser on a charge of conspiracy against the German throne.

* * * * *

1234.—A. L. MORGAN.

Alias "PANSY."

Alias "A. L."

Alias "Cap."

Description.—Short and thick set with oval pudgy face; age about 16; hands small and delicate, with the lines strongly defined; will be known by his handsome, imposing appearance and by his nervous, quick movements; bump of argumentation broadly developed; when last seen was smoking cubes in the shops.

Wanted by the University co-eds on the charge of burglary (heart-breaking) and also by Prexie for stealing the hands off the clock.

* * * * *

23.—SPOHN.

Alias "SPUX."

Alias "SPAWN."

Alias "The Man with the Rake."

Alias "What Makes the Grass Grow."

Description.—A dangerous looking individual, readily recognized by his individuality in dress; appears well-to-do, as he drives a horse and buggy. Has no kindness for animals, as he has often been seen chasing herds of livestock with rocks for the pure love of the sport. Has been seen time and again about the University in the company of new boards; was once seen turning a hand spring.

Wanted by Kessler on a charge of knowing too much.

* * * * *

1000.—Y. W. C. A.

Alias "GRAFT."

Alias "CANDY SALE."

Description.—There are many forms of this criminal, round, thin, fat, wooly and fluffy; may be known by the abnormal development of the hand, and also by the extreme liberality and unselfishness of temperament; are often seen about Prexie's office, and these are the most dangerous members of the gang.

Wanted by the boys on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses.

103.—J. B. SPEER.

Alias "BAD MAN JIM."

Description.—Although unprepossessing in appearance this man is one of the most dangerous criminals now at law; a very mysterious looking person, yet subject to feminine flattery to an astonishing degree; last seen in the company of a typewriter in Prexie's office; reported to believe in polygamy, and his actions bear out this belief; may be looked for about dances, as he has a mania for this form of amusement.

Wanted by Berney Kitt on a charge of alienating affections.

* * * * *

16,937.—J. S. SNODDY.

Alias "SUNNY JIM."

Alias "BEAUTY."

Description.—One of the most particular criminals known to this office; at times most retiring, at other times most erratic in his movements; walks sideways like a crab, and bears some surprising likenesses to this animal; starts a conversation with "Just the girl I was looking for;" possesses that far away look characteristic of the more desperate criminals; countenance child-like, though possessing a bold, bad eye.

Wanted by many girls on a charge of breach of promise.

* * * * *

24.—HERMAN McGREGOR.

Alias "Herm."

Description.—A troubled countenance accompanied by a deep wrinkle between the eyes is the principal feature of this person; usually wears a blue uniform, trousers rolled up, and may be identified by his peculiarities of speech; repeatedly says, "Do it over again."

Wanted by the Freshmen mechanical students on a charge of running an open shop.

* * * * *

3678.—O. J. BERRY.

Alias "O. J."

Description.—Of a small, slight build, perhaps 5 feet tall; of a ferocious cast of countenance, with a continual expression of self-absorption; may be known by a peculiar muscular movement about the jaws, which is almost never absent; if caught, search for mysterious pink oblong packages labelled "Yueatan;" this is a sure means of identification.

Wanted by the University on a charge of disturbing the peace.

* * * * *

No. 185.—BERNEY KITT.

Alias "KITTEN."

Description.—Of a similar build to No. 1234, and possesses some of the same characteristics; extreme agility and quickness of movement are his predominant features; may be known by his extremely light hair and fair complexion.

He and his pal, "Spider" Toole are wanted on a charge of burglary, having engaged in a slight "altar"-cation with Prexie.

Song of the Sea

Flo was fond of Ebenezer—
Eb, for short, she called her beau.
Talk of "tide of love"—great Caesar!
You should see 'em, Eb and Flo.

Eb and Flo they stood as sponsors
When Flo's sister was a bride,
And when bride and groom receded
They, too, went out with the tied.

When their first child came—a daughter—
The nurse, for a larger fee,
Went to someone else who sought her,
Leaving Eb and Flo at sea.

Daughter's given name was Cooper—
"Coo," for short; and when she grew,
Her beau's name was William Hooper.
You should see 'em, Bill and Coo.

Next there came a second daughter—
Name: Hemina—and she saw
And wed a man whose name was Hawley.
You should see 'em, Hem and Haw.

And the sea weeds of the relict
(Flo, a widow, understand!)
At the summer beaches signal
That craft is now unmanned.

This happy couple, Eb and Flo,
Then named their third little daughter,
To be in keeping, don't you know—
Minnehaha, Laughing Water.

Next came triplets, heaven bless 'em!
Ebenezer looked quite grave,
Then quoth he to his Floretta,
"This looks like a tidal wave!"

When these cherubs of the sea
Had the colic, yes, all three—
Eb and Flo lost much sleep
Rocking the "cradle of the deep."

The triplets now are cutting teeth,
And, alas, it hence befalls
That in Eb and Flo's life voyage
There are many grievous squalls.

Eb had shown a greed most stony,
Licking up the golden sand;
Flo, with rattling alimony,
Can't regret their busted strand!

A preface to a larger edition.—Book.

Who's Who in Montana

THREE'S one who is dear to each heart,
The little instructor in Art,
She's our class chaperon;
But this we must own,
She's not artful enough for her part.

HER work always raises a fuss;
and sometimes it just makes us cuss.
For she goes to Seattle
And learns how to prattle
And then tries to teach it to us.

ELUDE mathematics we may,
But there's none of us here that can say,
By the old rule of three
Or the slide-rule, that he
Makes elliptical curves the wrong way.

FOREVER the praises we'll render
Of Montana's foremost defender.
He gives chapel talks
About "Keep on the Walks."
Take care, or he'll play the suspender.

AGENTLEMAN new in our ranks,
We got him to care for our cranks,
He worships machines
And also baked beans,
But as to his grammar—no thanks!

COULD ever a man so precise
Be anything other than nice?
He teaches of Greeks
And other old freaks,
And roots out the weeds in a trice.

UNLESS you're a regular shark
You'll find yourself quite in the dark;
But the lady in math
Tries to show you the path;
It's the limit, you'll say, and no lark.

LET me say just a word to you men
Concerning the A. S. U. M.
We are badly in debt
But you'll save us yet,
If you'll all buy these tickets—ahem!"

THE scribe of the bunch, the least meek,
Has a tongue for each day in the week;
He learned Esperanto,
And now we all want to,
That we with our neighbors may speak.

YOU all know the butterfly man
Makes his courses as hard as he can;
What with lobsters and fishes
Bum jokes and white dishes!
You're sure to come under his ban.

OH THE English that some people speak!"
She says, "Will the lowest Dutch beat?"
With her "beautiful soul,"
And her hair black as coal,
She'd make Ike Marvel feel meek.

FULL of wisdom as anyone here
Is our English professor, I hear.
"An 'S' starts your name
And with mine 'tis the same,"
He tells her. She answers, "How queer."

THE professor of literature
Uses slang undiluted and pure;
It's really too bad,
And it makes us feel bad,
That we must such language endure.

HAIL, all, to the chemistry shark
Who loves to go out on a lark;
Her speeches are neat
And cut rather deep,
But her bite's not so bad as her bark.

ENORMOUSLY fond of football,
And quite six or seven feet tall,
His gauntlet he hurls,
When he won't "Talk to girls"
Of course! He can't like them at all!

UNUSUALLY versed in Psych-lore
He seems to think grammar a bore;
"It don't really pay
To put off, day by day,
Writing up Ethic's notes, I am sure."

OF ALL the Profs. under the sun,
The History Prof. is the one;
With manner as staid
As a proper old maid,
Whom you'd never suspect of a pun.

FOR once and for all, let me say,
(She says it each hour of the day)
"If you really must smile
And talk all the while,
Go out on the campus and stay."

MY FRIENDS really often ask me,
"Now, who can that learned boy be?"
But they laugh in their sleeve—
You can't make them believe
He's the Prof. of that fierce chemistry.

'10's Victory

Once upon a spring day dreary, while the Freshman ponders weary,
Over something quite exciting they could do to vent their spite.
They discovered, oh surprising, one among them swift uprising,
Who related how the Sophies were to have a stunt that night.
"Let us steal," he muttered hoarsely, "steal the Prexie Sophomore"—
Only this and nothing more.

Presently their souls grew stronger; hesitating then no longer,
"Sir," quoth they "your plan's a good one, quickly let us then explore!"
Scarcely had the Freshies spoken, when as if by magic token
Allan Toole appeared before them passing through a distant door.
"Come and see our bull-pup, Allan," Mac called to the Sophomore,
Only this and nothing more.

So into Mac's chamber turning, all his soul within him yearning
For a chance to see the bull-pup, Toole went, filled with trust galore;
But the Freshies there had waited, and alas for Toole, belated,
He was overwhelmed by numbers and soon thrown upon the floor.
"You are kidnapped from your party, proud and haughty Sophomore."
Kidnapped, this and nothing more."

Deep into the darkness peering, long he stood there, wondering, fearing,
Hoping he might reach the party and the good things there in store.
But he heard in deepest sorrow, "You must stay until tomorrow—
Doubtless all your class will miss you as they never have before,
Since you are the host, oh Allan, and the Prexie Sophomore."
"Damn," said Allan, nothing more.

While he sat engaged in guessing, but no syllable expressing,
To his eyes appeared a vision which he had not seen before,
In amazement mixed with gladness, then he soon dispelled his sadness,
For the Junior and the Senior presidents were on the floor.
"We are kidnapped by the Freshies, 'et tu Prexie Sophomore?'"
Allan quoth, "Forevermore!"

So the Freshies tell the story, how they won their fame and glory,
How they captured all the presidents like knights in days of yore,
How they kept the party guessing, till at last the trick confessing,
Sent a note to Allan's mother—where it caused a mighty roar.
"From his seat among the mighty we've put down the Sophomore."
Quoth the Freshies—nothing more.

I Don't Like the Faculty

(TUNE: Time, The Place, and The Girl.)

Sung by the
JUNIOR QUARTETTE

1st Tenor—BERNEY KITT
2nd Tenor—Ivan Leininger
Baritone—FRANK LEWIS
Bass—CHAS. FARMER

I.

The scene is a room in the basement's deep gloom,
Some Juniors and Sophies there hide;
The Sophs often say—"Aw, we really can't stay;"
But the Juniors have locked them inside.
At last Prexie knocks. "Now, I'll wager my socks,"
Cries someone, "The Sophs are without!
Come right in old man"—then they add, "If you can,
You're a wonderful sport there's no doubt."

CHORUS.

I don't like the Faculty,
They don't make a hit with me.
Ain't no use to bother
Sending notes for help to father,
While the whole blamed bunch are down on me.
I don't think that I'm so bad,
Nor the worst that Prexie's had;
I'm a jolly fellow, but when I get canned again,
I want preserving.

II.

He hammered away with an ax, so they say,
On finding the door had been locked;
At last the lock broke, and the Juniors awoke
To the fact that 'twas Prexie who'd knocked.
"It's suspension for you," then he said to a few,
"This shows what class spirit will do."
They called on him soon, and have since sung this tune,
Which seems to be their point of view.—Chorus:

A BAD HABIT.

There's a habit most appalling
In its clutches we are falling,
It's the stunt of getting dances months before;
If you're silly and have waited
You will dance with girls you've hated
If you try to fill your program on the floor.

Laura to Minta.—"Say, you know I rather like the way Jim proposes. It's like this, 'Will you marry me?'"
"Why do you ask?"
"Partly from curiosity, partly because it's the only way I can make sure of seeing you again, and then, I like your hair.
Will you?"

* * * * *

(In drawing room.) "Bonner!"

"Yes."

"Bonner!!"

"What the dickens do you want?"

"I was just cussing. Isn't Bonner the biggest dam around here?"

Acknowledgements

BEFORE laying down our pens and consigning the 1909 Sentinel to the hands of the printer, the editors wish to acknowledge the invaluable aid tendered by loyal friends and conscientious workers. Especially to Charles L. Eggleston and Miss Florence De Mers we owe thanks for drawings, which have enabled us to make the book what it is. To the latter, also, goes the credit for the design on the cover.

The editors feel deeply indebted also to Prof. M. J. Elrod for photographs used in the front of the book and in the Literary Department; to Joe Malcomson for headings in the Athletic Department; to Harold Daigler, R. Kilburn and Lulu Cobban for drawings; to the editors of the 1908 Sentinel for valuable hints and suggestions on the editing of the book; to the business men of the state, through whose liberality and loyal support we are enabled to make the book a financial success; and to the many others, who, by thought or deed, have given us assistance in the work.

Why Nonpareil Ice Cream
is good to eat

Cream fat is one of the most healthful articles of food that can be taken into the human system. Everyone knows how healthful pure cream is.

It will arm the body to resist disease better than anything else there is. Cream is the greatest complexion beautifier in the world. Drink lots of cream or eat lots of Nonpareil ice cream and you will have perfect health and a perfect complexion.

When pure cream is frozen into Nonpareil ice cream it makes one of the most healthful as well as one of the most delicious foods that can be imagined. Ice cream is more easily digested and will do the system more good than anything else you can eat, especially in warm weather. Ask any doctor you know what he thinks of the food value of pure frozen cream or ice cream.

All flavors of ice cream, sherbets and ices in bulk or brick. Special orders on short notice. Delivered packed in ice to keep for several hours.

MINING ENGINEERS AND CONTRACTORS

407-409 Phoenix Building, BUTTE, MONT.

ENGINEERING DEPARTMENT—We are prepared to examine and make reports on mining properties. Copper, silver, lead and low-grade gold a specialty. Reports on water power development and best means for mechanical transportation of ores. We map and survey mining districts. We act as consulting or supervising engineers.

CONSTRUCTION DEPARTMENT—We contract to sink shafts, drive tunnels, shafts or raises, equip hoisting and power plants. Construct ditches, flumes, dams and reservoirs. All our work is done on a basis of actual cost, plus supervising fee. We act as agents for the client, and our interests are identical with his.

OPERATING DEPARTMENT.—We operate mines and mills, and furnish all superintendence and labor. We make monthly reports. Our engineers, foremen and purchasing agent become, for the time being, employees of our client.

The Greater Symons Store

HIS is a splendid time to investigate the economical methods of the Symons store—right now, when the store is packed full of new merchandise, when everybody, everywhere, is looking for the fresh, new things—the latest fads and fashions—when every one is thoroughly enthused with the season's necessities and the season's buying—we say this is a most advantageous time for thorough investigation. At no time in the history of Symons has this great store been more inviting than now. The stocks have never been so large, not nearly; the styles have never been so pretty, scarcely by half; the varieties have never been so broad, so well selected, so prettily designed, not in many seasons. From the downstairs basement of dainty tableware and novelties up through the spacious aisles of the main floor, on up to magnificent departments of tailored wares and the matchless millinery salon, there are newness and beauty everywhere.

*In addition to this array of splendor,
the Symons system of economy is rigorously applied and reigns supreme over all. Come and see.*

The University of Montana

Founded in 1895.

The University of Montana now has a body of cultured and refined young men and women of which the State may well be proud.

The University stands for the development of the individual—here the young student is assisted in his self-development.

Professor and student come into personal contact—a great advantage to the student.

The Curriculum of the University includes both Academic and Technical Courses. Here may be obtained an education, either of culture or technical science, or both.

Registration Day for the First Semester of 1908-9 will be September 11, 1908.
